I work for a major airline. This is how many seats are left on all the flights from ATL to DC on the 5th. I think it's going to be pretty wild. (media.patriots.win)

Same here. I've been checking bookings going into BWI and IAD all weekend and next week and we are packed. I'd never make it on standby, so I'm driving. Gonna be wild!

Different airline than you guys but pretty much the biggest one, all our flights are completely NEGATIVE going in to DC from Sunday on... I'm talking -15, -16, -12 and we never stopped selling middle seats 😂

Yuuuup, that's pretty much why I'm not going. No way I would make it on standby and driving isn't an option right now, unfortunately.

14 ▼ I'm flight crew, so normally I'd just get there early and sign up for the jumpseat, but this is too important to gamble. Nice to see some full flights for a change. 2020 was brutal for us. Now that we've opened up the middle seats again it's slowly coming back.

5 ▼ Yeppers. Started Dec 1st. They were starting to talk wage concessions which didn't fly with our unions. Luckily that and furloughs were averted for the junior folks. I've been on a voluntary paid leave since May to help trim the fat.

2 ▼ Meanwhile, the regionals, but for the pilots, have been decimated. Lots of talent has left that will take years to replace, mechanics, dispatchers, support, ops, and management alike.

1 ▼ Our business model has changed significantly. It's definitely been a game of adaptation. It was pure luck I chose the airline I did when I was first hired 19 years ago. I've seen many friends at other carriers come and go. I think there's still consolidation that will need to happen. We had big international expansion plans before we got hit with the Max crisis and covid was the nail in the coffin.

8 ▼ Yeah it is. A good work around could be to fly to something like JFK or BOS first and then catch a flight to DCA. Those flights look pretty open still.

3 Hudson MA, or Hudson Valley NY? I love both ! Such history and buildings with actual character.

1 NY! Yes, lots of history. It's a very nice place. Haven't been to MA yet.

1 Hudson MA is pretty tiny, but Hudson NY has a big cool old abandoned state hospital which I adore!!

1 I always give a symbolic wave when I land on runway 6. I'm a big WW2 aircraft buff, and we lost a B-17 there in BDL a little over a year ago. That was a sad day. I still think about it everytime I fly in and out of there. RIP 909 and crew.

7 If I owned a major hotel chain, I'd offer rooms 50% off for anyone in town for the protest and otherwise try to cater to us.

It would be one of the best business decisions ever made. That chains hotels would be full for years to come.

2 ▼ That, or have you held for 24-48 hours ensuring that you miss all the activities. I doubt many lawyers will be on call for conservatives.

Maybe there needs to be an underground network for attorneys for patriots. (Truly underground- don't advertise!)

Just do your own search, have one or two or three backups.

If you somehow do get stuck- have a plan of action & list of contacts

3 ▼ Pretty sure GRR is close to sold out too (into IAD) ! I know from my cousin that there's an epically huge caravan coming into town from MI and will be leaving soon.

3 ▼ For my company, GRR to DTW looks great. You just can't get from DTW to DCA or IAD at all. Caravan would be awesome though.

3 ▼ Dear Lord,

Imgur hurts my soul to even back out of a post before I realize I just need to close the app.

It's THAT bad. And it used to be SO good. Now it is 99% political propaganda that seems to be working it just hurts, man 🙄

2 Just means it's oversold by 1 ticket. It's a regular thing because there's always a couple people that won't show up for their flight, resulting in empty seats.
